

Two-Column Scientific Layout

Column A discusses deterministic queues. Each file is processed strictly one at a time, so allocation patterns remain predictable and the worker releases memory after use.

Benchmarking measures character counts and latency for every document in the suite.

Column B discusses cloud builds. Native Rust compilation is delegated to the GitHub Actions windows-latest runner while the local machine keeps its lightweight toolchain.

Artifacts are verified for presence and size before a phase report may be marked complete.